Population Study

Abstract ID: 103

Incidence of chronic Hepatitis B among Orang Asli in Pahang

Mohd Al-Baqlish Mohd Firdaus\textsuperscript{a} | Tee Hoi Poh\textsuperscript{b}

\textsuperscript{a}Kulliyah of Medicine, International Islamic University Malaysia

\textsuperscript{b}Medical Department, Hospital Tengku Ampuan Afzan Pahang Malaysia

Introduction: The rate of Hepatitis B infection in Malaysia is 4.7% and the prevalence of Hepatitis B infection varies among ethnic group in Malaysia. The estimated prevalence of chronic Hepatitis B among Orang Asli in Malaysia is 8.3%. \textbf{Methods}: 232 Orang Asli participated in this study on a voluntary basis during two health screening in two Orang Asli Villages. Subjects serum HBsAg and HBsAb titres were taken and analyzed. \textbf{Results}: From 232 participants, there are 24 subjects who are HBsAg positive (10.3%) and only 15.9% of the population study has immunity to Hepatitis B. \textbf{Conclusions}: The incidence of chronic Hepatitis B among Orang Asli in Pahang is higher than the general population, and the rate of immunity to Hepatitis B are low compared to the general population.

\textbf{KEYWORDS}: Hepatitis B, Prevelance, Orang Asli, Pahang, Malaysia